Chickens...They're Back

By: Vega Blossom

Almost every person in the club knows that I like writing about chickens. So, recently I haven't been talking about them. Disappointing right? Well now they're back. I decided to start with a simple little poem about them:

*Chickens are special
When they are named Fred
So please excuse me as I
Need to cut off his head*

Chickens!

Is that not the most heartwarming thing you have ever heard? Well guess what? Here is another one:

*Magical chickens fall from the sky
People watch them fly right by
And then out of nowhere you hear someone cry
Hello chickens say your goodbyes*

I hope you had your weekly fill of chickens. So this is Vega blossom signing off.

Funny Ghost Fables: Story of Thanksgiving

By Griffin McNeil & Avery Denno

It's time for Thanksgiving. Now, be quiet and let me tell the story! Once there lived two teenagers named Avery and Griff. Avery and Griff were out running an errand for their mom. The list said: herbs, potatoes, bread and turkey.

They got the herbs, potatoes and bread but not the turkey. They looked all over town and couldn't find a turkey. But then they remembered something, they are hunters and their town has wild turkeys all around the woods. So they got their guns and went hunting. They got a turkey. When they got home all their relatives were there. Then they gave the turkey to there mom and she cooked it up. At 6 o'clock the thanksgiving party began. Dinner was great. After dinner they played some games then had dessert which was a big, fat turkey. During dinner Avery and Griff heard a noise that was like a turkey gobble. Then at bedtime Avery and Griff heard the noise again. Soon, it sounded like it was right outside their door. The door slowly started to creak and Avery saw a white turkey ghost. Then, Griff grabbed his pillow and threw it at the turkey and it disappeared. In the morning they told their mom what they saw. But Avery thought this was the beginning of something. Something big.

Pointless Wars

By: Anonymous

Pointless wars. Why did anyone invent them? Nobody knows. "All I know is that people must've really hated each other." Says Kyler Poe. That may be true, Kyler. All the possibilities exist. Someone could've started a war for absolutely no reason. Nobody knows who started the first war, but we could probably just look it up on Google or Ask.com. Bye!

My New Name

By Lima Penny

If you can guess who I really am, you win a binder. I just want you to know that if you saw me writing the article, you don't really win. If you cheat, and I figure it out, I'll add something to the prize list. Now I am going to write

The School is in Stress

By Austin Florio

One day my friend went to put up the flag and he put it up but it was upside down. He was embarrassed and the principle called the teacher and asked if he could see my friend. The principle asked my friend, "Do know what it means when the flag is up side down?" My friend said no. The principle said, "That means we are in stress." My friend was even more embarrassed. The principle said it was okay and it just needed to be fixed so my friend fixed the flag and went back to class.

Saturn's New Ring

By Laura Fraine

Around October 7, 2009, when scientists thought that there were only seven rings surrounding the planet Saturn, they found an 8th. 50 times farther away from the planet, this new ring is the largest of all. Since it is made of moon dust, scientists think it was made of the dust of Saturn's closest moon. I hope that scientists find more secrets of space soon!

Roller Coasters

By Ayslinn Johnson & Marcus Howard

When we went to Six Flags by ourselves we saw a humongous roller coaster. We wanted to go on it so bad that we started to SCREAM! We sat down and all of a sudden we started moving. We went faster and faster until suddenly we stopped! We were stuck at the top of a two, thousand foot roller coaster! Suddenly we fell off of the track! Then we started to fly, we flew higher and higher until we swooped down and landed on the track again! Then the roller coaster ended and our parents came and asked us if we wanted to go on it again! To be continued...

School

By Kamari Bridges

I think that we should all go to school and stay in school because everyone needs a degree. If you get a degree you have a lot of more chances getting a good well paying job. If you finish school you will be very intelligent. A lot of people don't finish school because they think it is a waste of time. Well it is not. I love school. The most fun part of school is homework. I like that your teachers give you a page and a book. That is an easy A+. And if you do it, you get a great grade. If you don't do it you flunk that paper and you have no more opportunities to make up for that one paper. Your whole grade gets messed up for that one paper.

I also think we should go to school because in life you cannot just go to a store and get something and say "I don't know how much money I have in my wallet. Can you count it for me?" That person that you asked could be dishonest and tell you that you have $2 when you really have $100. If you go to a restaurant, you need to be able to read a menu. So that is why we need to stay in school!

Taylor in the Art Room

By Rachel Budzielek

Taylor is very nice and has an awesome sense of style too. She rocks at art and takes it to a whole new level. On November 3rd, we made "old paintings". They were very awesome. She works only on Tuesdays so go into the art room and say hi or something like that. Sometimes we read a story and then do a craft about what we just read. Once, we did "Fancy Nancy" and "Cloudy With A Chance of Meatballs". I love art and she inspired me to sew, draw, paint, and make a Lady Gaga mask. That's the story on Taylor in the art room!
